I am writing a simple PHP script to list a directory and store the contents in an array. I want to use file_get_contents, but the site I am accessing requires FTP access, and I have no idea how to configure the FTP server to allow file_get_contents. Is it even possible to use file_get_contents in this situation? Thanks for any help. EDIT: I forgot to mention that the FTP server is hosted at the University of North Carolina. I don't know if this would make a difference or not, but I am on a CentOS 5.5 system. A: If you can get to the FTP server, you can use SSHFS for FTP access. This way you don't have to know how the FTP server is configured, and in fact can even access it without having the FTP credentials of the remote system. See the question Connect to FTP via SSH? for some useful info. A look at the influential thinkers who have shaped our understanding of Islam In the centuries-long history of Islam, a number of thinkers have shaped the way Muslims understand their faith. These range from Muhammad himself to Muslim thinkers of later centuries, including many of the modernists. Historically, there has been no shortage of people who have influenced how Muslims think about their faith. But rather than focus on those who in one way or another sought to reform Islam, the 2020 Roadmap Series places emphasis on the way Muslims understand their faith today. In doing so, we also attempt to answer the question: "How can Muslims influence the way they understand their faith in order to improve the lives of people around the world?" This series, whose authors include many Muslim religious scholars, looks at influential thinkers who have shaped our understanding of Islam over the past century or more. Here's what you can expect to see in this series: Contextualising the texts of Islam – what are they saying today? The Qur'an and Hadith: what can the texts say today? Imam and scholar: what does the legacy of Sunni Islam say about the issues of our time? Broad 82157476af
